Criminal Law Text Materials by Clarkson Keating - AbeBooks
Criminal law, whilst interesting, is not always easy. It is a subject which is closely linked to human psychology and philosophy, as such the legal undercurrents are often much deeper than in, say, the law of contracts. When I first read 'Criminal Law' by Clarkson and Keating, it was the first time I was reading a real textbook of law.

Criminal Law: Text & Materials, a leading criminal law textbook, has been written specifically for the law undergraduate, examining the main principles and rules of the criminal law and the theoretical bases upon which they are founded. This text combines the best features of a textbook with those of a cases and materials work, offering the reader sound guidance and direction on the law, while presenting key primary material.

Explains and evaluates the main rules of criminal law by reference to the objectives of law in society. This edition covers a number of important recent developments, including the substantial changes in sentencing as a result of the Criminal Justice Act 1991.

This study seeks to present the key principles of criminal law in a comprehensive and readable style. Concentrating on the more theoretical issues, the main focus is on the general principles of criminal liability.

By following the format of a textbook, but also giving the reader extracts from important original materials (both cases and academic articles), Clarkson and Keating is designed to fulfil the roles of both textbook and source book. The text's approach to the study of criminal law is to explain and evaluate the main principles and rules by reference to the objectives of the law. It seeks to provide a social context to the law rather than a mere analysis of the rules. This edition has been updated to include extracts and analysis of leading decisions such as Woollin, Hinks, B v DPP and Smith (Morgan) as well as an evaluation of reform proposals such as those relating to sentencing and sexual offences.
